

Chicagoland Publishing Company

A Division of the Chicago Tribune Company

Local Business Helps Build Community Commerce

Chicago, IL. November 28, 2003 – How do you make the transition from hobby to business, pastime to livelihood? The Harlem Ave Sewing Center is making this transition not only possible but also relatively easy for their customers. Thanks to the Sewing Centers' newest product, the PR-600 from Brother. Machine Embroidery enthusiasts now have the opportunity to turn their passion into profit.

Embroidery buffs that have long been embroidering names on Little League uniforms or embellishing holiday presents for friends can now launch a cottage industry at a reasonable cost. Brother's affordably priced PR-600 is an industrial strength embroidery machine loaded with professional features. Unlike many commercial machines the PR-600 is compact enough to fit anywhere in the home yet lightweight and portable enough to take on the road.

Store Manager, John Scarsella states "We've helped hundreds of people with successful business start-ups. It's a very rewarding experience for myself and my staff when we see a person coming into our sewing center and being able to help the person achieve their dream."

Harlem Ave Sewing Center is a family owned business servicing the sewing and embroidery industry since 1977. The Sewing Center carries a wide variety of new and pre-owned sewing and embroidery systems, expert repair service on all makes and models of sewing machines with free estimates. Sewing, Quilting, Machine Embroidery & Computer Digitizing Classes are also taught on the premises. For more information visit the Harlem Ave Sewing Center at 3906 N Harlem Ave, 1 block south of Irving Park Rd, in Chicago or call (773)625-1515